Yesterday we lost one of our most beloved friends, Nelson Salinas. Nelson was a dedicated employee of the Texas Association of Business, and he passed away suddenly and very unexpectedly yesterday morning. I know that many of you knew him personally, but those of you who didn't know him personally, I'm sure you knew of him. He was a larger than life character, and he will not be soon forgotten.

It's a rare thing to find someone who genuinely cares more for other people than they do for themselves, but Nelson was that person. He truly loved everyone he met. People who knew him and spent time with him often overheard him telling people, "help me help you." That's just the way he was. He was always trying to find a way to lend a hand, and he never expected anything in return. We're all better people for knowing him, and we should all go forward and try to look at life through his eyes.

Our thoughts and our prayers go out to all of his family, some of which are here today, and all of his friends, of which there are many. So members, I would ask you all to join us in a moment of silence in honor of our dear friend, Nelson Salinas.

CSHB 1736 - STATEMENT OF LEGISLATIVE INTENT

REPRESENTATIVE COLEMAN: Mr. Villalba, thanks for bringing this important bill on adoption of energy codes for single-family homes in Texas, while giving some flexibility to builders to meet the codes. While I support the intent of your bill, I wanted to ask some clarifying legislative intent questions to get them on the record.

REPRESENTATIVE VILLALBA: Sure.

COLEMAN: Is it your understanding that under your bill in Section 1 of the bill, under Chapter 388.003(a) of the Health and Safety Code, on lines 11 through 14, that where it says that the energy chapter of the 2015 International Residential Code is adopted on September 1, 2016, that that means that the code becomes effective on that date? In other words, in this case the word "adopted" means the code is not only adopted, but becomes effective in September of 2016 as the state energy code for single-family homes?

VILLALBA: Yes, the energy code of the 2015 International Residential Code would become effective on September 1, 2016.

COLEMAN: Great. Your bill sets scores for the optional compliance path known as an Energy Rating Index, or ERI, which is specifically allowed in the 2015 International Residential Code. Under your bill, those scores would expire in September of 2025 under Subsection (k) of the bill. Is it your understanding, however, that if the state, through the State Energy Conservation Office, were to adopt a new code, such as the 2021 International Residential Code, through rulemaking sometime in the future, that Subsection (k) might expire sooner since the new code would be replacing the old code, and the ERI in that case might no longer apply?

VILLALBA: It could. Subsection (j) only applies if the state energy code for single-family homes, as set by this bill or updated by the State Energy Conservation Office, contains an ERI optional compliance path. Should the State Energy Conservation Office adopt a new code in the future for single-family—such as the 2021 International Residential Code, which is allowed under my bill—then the scores set by this bill would only apply if the updated code has an ERI optional compliance path. If an updated state energy code does not have an ERI path, then the scores set in the bill do not apply.

COLEMAN: Finally, let me ask about local municipalities. As you know, certain cities, such as San Antonio, have already adopted the 2015 Residential Code or its equivalent and have also adopted an alternative compliance path—in this case, adopting an ERI minimum score of 59, which is slightly more efficient than the ERI scores in your bill. Is it your intention that cities that choose to adopt a more energy efficient code can continue to not only adopt a new code, but adopt their own ERI scores and enforce them should they choose to do so?

VILLALBA: Yes, a city that is in a nonattainment area or a city that is an affected county—such as San Antonio, Austin, Dallas, or Houston—will be allowed to enforce more energy efficient codes than what is in my bill, and they can choose to adopt more efficient ERI codes and enforce them. Nothing in my bill prevents such cities from adopting and enforcing more energy efficient codes.

COLEMAN: So if the City of Austin or the City of Dallas wanted to adopt an ERI of 59 or 50, they could do so and enforce that new ERI.

VILLALBA: Absolutely.

COLEMAN: Could they adopt a high score, like 70 or 75?

VILLALBA: Maybe, but that might impact issues like air quality and the State Implementation Plan, and I imagine, given we are setting what is supposed to be the minimum energy code for the state, there would be lots of opposition, and builders would have to convince their city council to do so. That would be a tough sell.

COLEMAN: Thanks. You have a great bill. I appreciate you working with all parties.

SB 788 - STATEMENT OF LEGISLATIVE INTENT

REPRESENTATIVE P. KING: Representative Paddie, you have a very good bill here, and I just have a brief clarifying question. The bill defines "business service user" as "a user of business service that provides telecommunications service." Is it your intent that the business service user in question is the business customer of an underlying telecommunications provider? In other words, is it the business customer of a telecommunications provider who then turns around and provides services to its customers or residents through a telephone system that you are referring to as a business service user?

REPRESENTATIVE PADDIE: Representative King, you are correct. The business service user is not the underlying provider of telecommunications service but rather that business owner who operates a telephone system that may require the dialing of an extra digit or digits to access an outside line. The examples most often cited are hotels and motels.

HB 3562 - STATEMENT OF LEGISLATIVE INTENT

REPRESENTATIVE STICKLAND: Ms. Thompson, thank you for working with me on this bill. As you know, I had some concerns, and we decided we could establish some legislative intent and take care of those issues. In your bill, it would require districts that allow students to purchase meals with an account or a prepaid meal card to adopt a policy on a grace period where students who run out of money on that card or account can go negative, which is essentially an extension of credit, and the bill would prevent the schools from charging an additional fee or interest. Am I understanding the bill correctly?

REPRESENTATIVE S. THOMPSON: The bill would suggest that school districts would think about developing policies for grace periods for those students who may run out of money on meal cards. And if they want to make those recommendations and take those things into consideration, to articulate those considerations to the parents of those students—to let them know what those considerations are.

STICKLAND: The bill would require districts to adopt a policy on this issue, but under this bill, the district could adopt a zero-day grace period. Is that correct?

S. THOMPSON: The district would not be required to adopt the policy. It's up to them whether or not they want to adopt a policy, but they could adopt a zero policy if they want to.

STICKLAND: So they could adopt a zero-day grace period? In fact, the bill is totally flexible on how long the grace period should be, if any, but it requires some other things like parental notification and no interest or fees as part of whatever policy is adopted. Is that your legislative intent?

S. THOMPSON: That's correct. It is.
